‘Run, don’t walk!’ — Jesus is risen, said Bishop Iffert at Easter Vigil

Maura Baker
Staff Writer

Mass opened in total darkness as the Easter Vigil begins, April 8, at the Cathedral Basilica of the Assumption, Covington. With not a candle, lamp or fixture, the congregation waited in silence before the Lucernarium began — a fire lit and blessed by Bishop John Iffert, celebrant of the Vigil Mass. The Easter Fire was placed near to where, just the day before, a life-sized statue of Jesus had laid, as if in a tomb, covered by a shroud. The new Paschal Candle is blessed and lit from this fire before the procession of the Mass.

From the Paschal candle, Knights and Dames of the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulchre, use bundles of candles received from the Holy Land to light small candles held by the congregation as well, and the Litturgy of the Word begins following the Easter Proclamation, or Exsultet.

“Happy Easter, everyone. Jesus is risen, he is risen indeed — and, everyone begins to run,” Bishop Iffert’s homily began. “Have you ever noticed that before? How often the disciples of Jesus are running in these Resurrection accounts?”

In the coming weeks, Jesus “will make himself known in the breaking of the bread.” The disciples will hear those stories, and “run back to Jerusalem.” Jesus will appear to Peter and the other disciples while fishing, and Peter will “jump out of the boat and run to Jesus.” Mary Magdalene goes to the tomb on Easter morning, and upon discovering the tomb with the stone rolled away, she “runs and tells the apostles.”

“Everyone’s running around here,” said Bishop Iffert.

As the Mass concluded, an Apostolic Blessing was extended to everyone who helped with the Easter Vigil.

Bishop Robert Barron, bishop of the Diocese of Winona-Rochester, Minnesota, and founder of Word on Fire, was then mentioned by Bishop Iffert for his time as a teacher at Mundelein Seminary.

“At least once each class period he would get excited about some great book that crossed his mind and he would say run, don’t walk, to the library to get your hands on it … for Bishop Barron, there is nothing more important than encountering the living Jesus in the minds of the great Christian scholars and saints,” said Bishop Iffert. “Run, don’t walk, was his way of conveying urgency to act quickly and without hesitation to let the holy ones lead us to Christ. Urgency, urgency of purpose. That’s one reason for Mary to run on this Easter night.”

“She is sent. She is a woman on a mission. Her teacher and Lord is risen from the grave and her heart is bursting with the news, Urgency,” Bishop Iffert continued later in his homily, “Living Water,” like that used at Baptism, “runs but never walks. Tonight, as we witness these three catechumens baptized, we know that they will be restored to innocence and invigorated in faith. They will put out the old self, die to it, and be reborn in Christ.”

“Of course, don’t walk, run, run, in these Resurrection accounts. Jesus is risen. He is coming to claim the one he has loved.”

Following the homily, the Rite of Initiation took place. In the Cathedral, three candidates were welcomed into full Communion with the Catholic Church through the rites of Baptism, Confirmation and Holy Communion. Baptismal promises were also renewed among the congregation.

As the Mass concluded, an Apostolic Blessing was extended from Bishop Iffert to the congregation, who expressed his gratitude to everyone who helped with the Easter Vigil.
Jesus ‘chooses to love us,’ said Bishop at Mass of the Lord’s Supper

Maura Baker
Staff Writer

In the early evening of April 6, people gathered to the Cathedral Basilica of the Assumption, Covington to celebrate the Evening Mass of the Lord’s Supper on Holy Thursday — the first day of the Easter Triduum. Bishop John Iffert, celebrant and homilist for the Mass, spoke in his homily of Jesus’s love for us, as his people. “Son of God and Son of Man, Jesus unites his will perfectly to the depths of humanity,” he said as his homily began.

“With the will of God the Father, Satan chooses to reject God’s love for God’s human creatures, and Satan takes as his mission to spite God’s determined love for the children of Adam and Eve,” he said. “God’s holy love for us is Satan’s pain.”

“Jesus,” he said, “fully God and fully human, unites his will to the Father’s divine will. He chooses to love us.”

As he continues, Bishop Iffert asks the question, “What does God’s love look like? How far will God’s love go? For my sake, and for years?”

The washing of the feet, as performed by Jesus in Scripture and again by priests on Holy Thursday, is meant to help disciples understand the meaning of the cross. “He knows the apostles don’t yet get it … they will not understand this night, or even the next day … but when the Spirit comes down to them, they will understand what he has done for them.”

“The Spirit will explain the parable,” Bishop Iffert said, “they will know just how extensively and expansively God loves them. We will know just how extensively and expansively God loves us — and, we will know how to love God in return.”

Following the Liturgy of the Word, the ritual of the Washing of the Feet took place. Bishop Iffert, with a towel around his waist as similarly described of Jesus in the Gospel, washed the feet of 12 individuals mirroring the 12 apostles.

Unlike every other Mass throughout the year, Holy Thursday Mass does not end with a final blessing. Instead, the Church symbolically follows Jesus’ agency into the garden as the altar is stripped bare — the altar cloth, candles and cross are removed. The Mass ends with a procession to the Altar of Repose, in which the Holy Eucharist is hidden away for the rest of the Triduum, until Christ’s resurrection on Easter Sunday. The congregation disperses in silence.

Mourning Jesus

The sacred silence continued as Good Friday services opened with a procession without music. When they came to the barren altar, Bishop John Iffert, Father Ryan Maher, rector; Mgr. Kurt Kemo, vice rector; Father Jordan Hainsley, master of ceremonies; Deacon Gerald Franzen and Deacon Michael Elmlinger, seminarian, lay prostrate in silent prayer — a sign of identification with Christ who “was obedient even to death on the Cross.”

Like Judas, Jesus loves us to the end, says Father Maher

Focusing on the betrayal of Judas, Father Maher recounts Jesus’s immeasurable love.

“After Judas had given Jesus this fateful kiss … Jesus responded to that kiss, and to Judas, and he said, ‘Friend, do what you have come for.’ After all Judas had done, after how far Judas had fallen, stinging the Lord’s lips with a kiss, Jesus says ‘Friend.’ Almost as if to say, Judas I love you. Judas I forgive you. Judas it’s not too late … Jesus loved Judas to the end and he loves us to the end, in our sins and our rebellions, in our neglects of the Lord, in our brokenness and in our weaknesses, which the Lord knows so well, Jesus calls us friend.”

In closing Father Maher encouraged the faithful to “die to our sinfulness … so that we can experience the Divine Friendship … so that we can experience His immeasurable love.”
First Friday Veneration of the True Cross to begin May 5 at the Cathedral Basilica

Staff Report

The Cathedral Basilica of the Assumption will begin offering First Friday Veneration of the True Cross of Our Lord Jesus Christ beginning Friday, May 5 from noon to 1 p.m. in the sanctuary of the Cathedral Basilica, Covington. A relic of the True Cross will be shown for veneration in a special throne in front of the main altar for both faithful and pilgrims to venerate in prayer.

The First Friday veneration is brought to the Cathedral Basilica through the combined efforts of Father Ryan Maher, Cathedral rector, and Muğr Builds Yewdell, prior of the local section of the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem. The relic has been made available by Father Jordan Hainsey, a Priest Knight of the Order and custos of Relics for the Diocese of Covington.

The relic will be shown in a new reliquary donated to the Cathedral Basilica for the monthly veneration. The cross reliquary features the traditional implements of the passion.

“People have prayed before the Cross of Jesus ever since the earliest days of the faith,” said Father Hainsey. “It is one of the oldest and most devout practices in the Christian tradition.”

“This is a great way for the faithful to continue to receive graces we received during Lent and at Easter,” said Father Maher. “In praying before the True Cross, we are paying the highest honor to the Lord through the instrument of our salvation. The Cross is inseparable from his sacrifice, so in reverencing his cross we, in effect, adore Christ himself.”

From the very beginning of Christianity the cross of Jesus has been an object of special veneration. The Apostles considered it the most important object in their lives and in the life of the world.

“O precious Cross!” cried St. Andrew as he was being martyred. “How long have I desired thee! How warmly have I loved thee! How constantly have I sought thee!”

Throughout history have all identified the cross as the only path to salvation. “Apart from the cross, there is no other ladder by which we get to heaven,” wrote St. Rose of Lima.

St. John Vianney, patron of priests, observed: “Everything is a reminder of the Cross. Ourselves are made in the shape of a cross.”

Even St. Paul, patron saint of the Diocese of Covington, wrote to the Galatians: “But far be it from me to glory except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ.” (Gal 6:14).

“The cross is the symbol of our Order of the Holy Sepulchre, but more importantly the cross is at the center of our faith,” said Muğr Builds Yewdell. “Whether one is able to spend five minutes or the whole hour praying before the True Cross, we hope people will come and take advantage of the opportunity to get closer to the Lord.”

The relic to be used in the First Friday veneration is from the same cross found in 324 A.D. by St. Helena, the mother of Constantine. Tradition holds that she found three crosses buried at Golgotha but didn’t know which was the one on which Jesus had been crucified. To test and see which was the true cross, members of her courtiers searched for a leper at the outskirts of Jerusalem. Once one was found, they returned to the site of Golgotha, where the leper was instructed to touch each of the crosses one by one. He touched the first one and then the second, but nothing happened. When he touched the third cross, the leper was instantly healed of his leprosy. From that time on, the cross was known as “The True Cross.”

As the years passed, tiny fragments were distributed to the care and protection of many Catholic churches around the world.

“The First Friday veneration will be held at the same hour as we have confessions,” said Father Maher. “I’m so pleased we can provide this opportunity for people to partake of the Sacrament of Confession as well as be able to pray before the True Cross where they can unite not only their sufferings with the Lord, but also their joys and hopes.”

Getting to know the chimeras that have been guarding the Cathedral for many years

Staff Report

Visitors to the Cathedral Basilica of the Assumption in Covington may notice that the chimeras are missing from the rooftop. Over the years, the iconic figures had experienced much wear and tear and were removed from the Cathedral on March 16. As part of the “Restored in Christ” initiative to maintain the cathedral’s outer façade, each of the chimeras will be recreat-ed and cast in terra cotta to return by Fall 2023. As the “Restored in Christ” initiative unfolds over the next several months, thanks to the cataloguing of Stephen Knezuzek, Cathedral historian and archivist, the Messenger will illustrate and introduce many of the chimeras this week we meet Le Stryge.

Bougeur! My name is “The Vampire,” or “Le Stryge” in French, and I am a chimera (known colloquially as “gargoyle”) who lives at the Cathedral Basilica of the Assumption. I am modeled after a chimera that shares my name from the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris. I was sculpted by the French architect Eugène Viollet-le-Duc, famous for his restoration of the most prominent medieval landmarks in France— including Notre Dame. My design is regarded as Viollet-le-Duc’s most famous creatures, and possibly the most famous chimera in Europe.

When Most Hispanics were Catholic...

The trend is clear. As the Hispanic population grows quickly and steadily in the United States, fewer Hispanics identify as Roman Catholic. There are many million Hispanic people in our country today. But in truth I had only a vague notion of the deep waters that we have been helping to navigate for the past 40 years.

Here are a dozen things I think I have heard or read. At St. John Paul II said, “All formation… is ultimately a self-formation. No one can replace us in the responsi-

1) If you have or will have children, or at least the institution that mediates it.

2) Root yourself in a parish and decide to live with the things you don’t like. In the great scheme of things, personal preferences, tastes and opinions don’t matter. Keep praying. When it seems like no one is listening, pray more.

3) Don’t become a Sacristy Rat. Participate in the missa-

4) The church is even bigger than you thought, and it’s easy to get lost. Newsies would do well to find a few tour guides who can show them around. They’ll find what they need, but love, without pushing it as the best-or-only path for everyone. Each of us should discover our leading grace.

5) Find a spiritual director and a posse of go-to saints. If you’re a cradle Catholic, don’t let that discourage you. If you’re a convert, don’t let it make you feel lonely — or frustrated that the formation catechumens and candidates receive is almost always superior to what is provided to everyone else.

6) There are some people who are ready to convert new Catholics while the chrism is still wet on their foreheads. And others who are equally ready to view them as new Catholics with 12 pieces of advice (Pastores dabo vobis). No. 6). The Order of Christian Initiation of Adults (OICA) is a guided process of intense catechesis and prayer aimed toward baptism, confirmation and Eucharist. After that, the training wheels come off and you are ready to ride. But remember: the best way to keep your own faith growing is to contribute to the formation of others.

7) Find a spiritual director and a posse of go-to saints. If you’re a cradle Catholic, don’t let that discourage you. If you’re a convert, don’t let it make you feel lonely — or frustrated that the formation catechumens and candidates receive is almost always superior to what is provided to everyone else.

8) Root yourself in a parish and decide to live with the things you don’t like. In the great scheme of things, personal preferences, tastes and opinions don’t matter. Keep praying. When it seems like no one is listening, pray more.

9) Don’t expect Catholic life to be easy. Remember: we are following someone who was persecuted and put to death when he didn’t deserve it.

10) Don’t become a Sacristy Rat. Participate in the mission of the church to be Christ in the world. Those who never leave the altar will always be preaching to the choir.

11) Faith is personal, not institutional. Keep Jesus first. Not even the church can (or should) take his place. The Eucharist draws people to the church and the Eucharist is what keeps us here. Nothing else comes close.

Sometimes we forget that while the church is a treasury of God’s grace, it was meant to be lived in. Welcome home, new Catholics, (and sorry about the mess). The ongoing mass abandonment of a living relationship ministry a correlation between the exponential rise of you I take refuge. "I note in my own 19 years of priestly life is enough to note that barely a week goes by without some news item dealing with what is now a formal socio-psychological phenomenon." It is precisely to the pain of the world — to our own pain — that the Church cries out, "Keep me, O God, for in you I take refuge." I note in my own 19 years of priestly ministry a correlation between the exponential rise of pain in our time and the pain of the Church. The Church feels the pain of those who are lost, a sort of 'covenant' between generations.

Today our society is very far from Pope John Paul II's vision. Pope Francis often speaks of the "throwaway culture" to describe the neglect and abandonment of those considered useless, particularly the very young and the very old.

Gregory the Great, in a homily, declared: "In a society that is filled with so much pain and is consumed with anxiety, we do no one a favor by avoiding the pain of those who ask for it. "

Among the important issues involving the dignity of human life, abortion is of prime importance. It is not the only pro-life issue.

As Little Sisters we are deeply concerned about the "other end" of the pro-life spectrum — the care of the sick, the elderly and the dying.

In his landmark encyclical, Evangelium Vitae, Pope John Paul II wrote, "Neglect of the elderly or their outright rejection are intolerable. Their presence in the family or at least their close-ness to the family in cases where limited living space or other reasons make it impossible, is of fundamental importance in creating a climate of mutual interaction and enriching communication between the different age groups. It is therefore important to preserve, or to re-establish where it has been lost, a sort of 'covenant' between generations.

Today our society is very far from Pope John Paul II's vision. Pope Francis often speaks of the "throwaway culture" to describe the neglect and abandonment of those considered useless, particularly the very young and the very old.

Francis' concept of the throwaway culture aligns with what John Paul II termed the culture of death. I am concerned that the aging society, along with other social issues, including invocations to our Congregation, is related to this culture of death. A decrease in the number of young women leaving our community may also be related to the fact that many young people today grow up far from their elders, without roots, as Pope Francis has often said. From Little Sisters who share their vocation stories, it is evident that a close and loving relationship with grandparents or other family elders is often the spark that lights the flame of a vocation at the service of the elderly for several years now, the Little Sisters have been grappling with the same workforce issues faced by other providers of senior care. Thomas More University focuses on being student ready with new programs and initiatives

Contributed by Thomas More University

Thomas More University announces several new academic programs and a health and wellness focused initiative to ensure that the Thomas More experience sets students up for a meaningful life and career. Rolling out in the 2023-24 academic year, these new additions spring from goals set forth in Thomas More’s five-year strategic plan — Lighting the Way.

Two new undergraduate program offerings from the Robert W. Plaster College of Business are set for the 2023-24 academic year. University administration sought community input to build a Bachelor of Science in finance program that answered both employer and student needs. The result is a program that offers students the option to choose one of two tracks — financial services or corporate finance. The Robert W. Plaster College of Business also introduces a Bachelor of Arts in tourism and recreation management, which recognizes an area with the potential for significant career growth while there are few other programs in the region offered.

A new graduate program is also on the horizon at Thomas More. The Master of Public Health program, set to launch in fall 2023, prepares students with skills in a wide range of health sciences related to food, transportation, gym memberships, and even global level,” says Kaitlin Vollet Martin, Ph.D., assistant professor of health sciences at Thomas More.

“Public health is a rapidly growing field with continued projected job growth; therefore, the need to train future public health professionals is critical.”

Outside of academic programming, the University launches an innovative new cost structure to offer students greater value and ensure transparency. The “Saints Essentials” program begins in the 2023-24 academic year for all new students. Under this new campus initiative to promote student health and wellness, what other colleges tack on as extra “fees” are consolidated and included in the price of tuition with every student receiving a full suite of benefits. These benefits include an all-access dining pass, expanded access to the Northern Kentucky Five Seasons Family Sports Club, a $300 credit per semester toward the purchase of textbooks and course materials, parking, year-round TANK bus transportation, intramural sports programming, unlimited access to wellness services, secondary insurance for all active student athletes, unlimited printing, and admission to all home athletics events.

“We want to ensure that our students can fully focus on what is important — their education,” said Thomas More University President, Dr. Joseph L. Chillo. “Students at other institutions have the added stress of worrying about costs related to food, transportation, gym memberships, and even basic needs. With Saints Essentials, Thomas More University is taking an innovative approach to college costs by providing every student with what they need to be successful in the classroom and beyond.”

With One Heart Planning Commission is closer to recommending diocesan pastoral plan

Staff Report

The Planning Commission met this past weekend, April 14 and 15, at Cristo Rey Parish, Florence, to continue its work drafting recommendations for the diocesan priority plan. This group, appointed by Bishop John Iffert and guided by Brendan Menuey, Leadership Consultant for the Catholic Leadership Institute, has been meeting regularly since August.

The Planning Commission is charged with proposing a plan that the Diocese could use to guide its mission over the next several years. In developing the plan, the Commission has reviewed the feedback from the Deanery Strategy Sessions and the Focus Groups that were held in the Diocese throughout the fall and winter.

From October through January, five Deanery Strategy Sessions were held across five locations, with 43 parishes/missions represented, and over 375 participants attending. Additionally, 23 Focus Groups across six locations, with over 130 people attending were held. Focus Group sessions were specific to priests, deacons, young adults, lay leaders, and Spanish-speaking lay leaders.

In addition to reviewing the feedback from the people of the Diocese of Covington, the Commission has reviewed the plans of other dioceses to see a variety of approaches to this important work. Their work this past weekend was to identify priorities and to propose goals, strategies and actions that will help the Diocese in its mission.

The Planning Commission will present its recommendations to Bishop Iffert in late May. Over the summer, Bishop Iffert and his leadership team will review the plan and make any necessary adjustments. The diocesan priority plan is expected to be presented to the people of the Diocese on or near Sept. 30, 2023.

The war on child sexual abuse: The most powerful weapon is education

Julie Feinauer
Contributor

Did you know that nearly 10 percent of children will report being victims of sexual abuse before they reach 18? Unfortunately, it is estimated that only about 38 percent of all children ever report being victims of sexual abuse before they reach 18. This means that the true impact of the problem may not be known. Also, those who are victims of voyeurism, exposure to pornography, sexting or other types of grooming where there is no touch but are harmed none-the-less, are not counted here, and would only raise the numbers of those affected.

Recently the CDC stated that child sexual abuse is a national public health crisis due to the lifelong impact to health, opportunity and well-being. They state that the estimated lifetime economic burden of child sexual abuse in the United States alone is around $10 billion. These numbers are staggering, but together we can fight to bring about change.

In the prevention of child sexual abuse, education and training are powerful weapons. When communities are educated about the tragic epidemic of child abuse, a new generation of parents and teachers will learn how to identify deceitful grooming behaviors, how to calmly listen to a child who discloses abuse, and how to make a report of abuse to child protection authorities. These skills are invaluable and may save the life of a child. This training, followed up by the monthly bulletins and "refreshers" modules help keep each user of the VIRTUS system up to date on the latest issues in child protection. In addition, principals, counselors, teachers, and Parish School of Religion teachers are further trained to educate children using the VIRTUS — Empowering God's Children program (EGC). EGC, the children's training platform, has made safe environment education equitable across all classrooms.

These modules will be accessible from April 24 to May 8. Visit awiredfamily.org. Did you miss Steve Smith’s presentations but would really like to learn more about how to keep the children in your life safer? Follow the QR code or the link below to access seven FREE modules that will help you be better informed and give you tools to navigate the online world with your family. It is with pride to share that nearly 34,000 employees and volunteers have completed VIRTUS — Protecting God’s Children training. These individuals have been instructed on how to identify deceitful grooming behaviors, how to calmly listen to a child who discloses abuse, and how to make a report of abuse to child protection authorities. These skills are invaluable and may save the life of a child. This training, in identifying those trusted adults in each of their lives. Children then know who they can turn to if they need to discuss difficult issues like physical or mental health issues, bullying or abuse.

In addition to the EGC program, schools and PSR programs are encouraged to conduct training on (age appropriate) related issues such as bullying, drug and alcohol use, suicide prevention, and internet safety.

Community programming is an important part of education. The Safe Environment Office kicked off the year with two outstanding presentations by Steve Smith with "A Wired Family." Mr. Smith spoke about not only the dangerous predators that lurk behind the screen, but the illicit material that is easily attainable with just the click of a key. By discussing difficult but timely topics, everyone is better prepared for difficult situations that may arise in the community and maybe even in our own homes. The Safe Environment Office looks forward to providing additional community speakers and workshops in the coming year.

In your part to help win the war on abuse. Get educated about the topic, take the VIRTUS Protecting God’s Children training, attend a community program, or do some research on reputable websites like RAINN, The National Center for Victims of Crime, Darkness to Light, or the CDC. Support agencies that help children and families dealing with abuse, especially those in our area — the Family Nurturing Center, Northern Kentucky Children’s Advocacy Center, or the Diocesan Catholic Children’s Home. These are just a few of the places that work to ensure brighter futures for everyone.

Above all, don’t be afraid to talk to others about what you have learned. Enlist others to the call of advocating for children. When we join in the army to protect God’s children, we are becoming allies to create a better world and a safe environment for all. Pro-life at the parish level: Walking with Moms in Need at St.Thomas

Ellen Curtin  Contributor

All mothers struggle. That is the one unalterable truth of motherhood. Older mothers struggle when grown children suffer financial woes, marital strife and spiritual emptiness. Mothers of teens struggle with children immersed in peer pressure and social media frenzies. Young mothers struggle to balance hectic school schedules, job demands and family obligations.

But it is our youngest and often most vulnerable mothers who may struggle the most particularly when they lack emotional and financial support. Imagine someone who is unexpectedly pregnant or faces unanticipated complications. She has grown up hearing that inconvenient children are disposable, that success and motherhood are opposites. Even if she lives where elective abortion is restricted, mail-order pills and out-of-state abortion sites may tempt her. In her desperation she will sacrifice her own child.

Thanks be to God, your parish and mine can save them both! An all-parish rescue effort launched by the US Catholic Bishops and called “Walking with Moms in Need” (or WWMIN, pronounced “women”) aims to provide tangible and spiritual help from coast to coast. When St. Thomas pastor Father Ross Kelsch, called a parish meeting last August to discuss WWMIN, I was one of a dozen women who showed up, eager to explore this powerful and urgently needed pro-life opportunity.

We are all ages, with children of all ages and families of all sizes, united in our belief that Walking with Moms will be life-changing and life-saving for every life we touch. Our e-mail list quickly grew to over 50 supporters. It has been thrilling to see how quickly our group moved into action to support, comfort and aid young families before and after birth.

Walking with Moms starts with taking stock of local resources, then reaching out lovingly and concretely to women in need. We began by not re-inventing the wheel: that is, by finding out what help already exists. Members contacted our parish St. Vincent de Paul Society, the nearby Care Net Pregnancy Center in Cold Springs, the Rose Garden Home Mission in Covington and neighboring parishes to ask how we might work with them.

The traditional Baby Bottle Campaign helps Care Net fund a wealth of resources from free ultrasound and adoption planning to parenting classes and material aid. But because some clients have so few belongings, Care Net counselors suggested we organize virtual (online, anonymous) baby showers, to fill gaps while respecting personal privacy. Our Springtime showers will soon welcome and celebrate these new lives.

Patty Kuns, a Care Net nurse and parish grandmother, said, “I am excited and honored to be able to be a part of St. Thomas Parish serving moms in need.” When Patty and her niece Katlin Marks coordinated a fish fry for WWMIN in early Lent, they first invited the parish to donate specific baby items Care Net was short of. An empty crib set up in the cafeteria quickly overflowed. Proceeds from the event will help as we plan more ways to help moms in and outside the parish.

For the Rose Garden’s family resource center, we want to go beyond the usual call for diapers and formula. A fun and practical parish project will be to use their list of recommended mom and baby items, filling “Welcome Baskets” with themed outfits, blankets and toys (an animal, flower, sport, etc.) plus mommy needs like lotion and shampoo.

The parish St. Vincent de Paul leaders were glad to meet with our WWMIN coordinator, Jaime Middendorf. “They gave us a lot of information about ways we can partner with them,” Jaime said. “We actually came up with a feasible, effective way we could make a big impact for them and the moms they help.”

In fact, one of the first group efforts was a Meal Train using online sign-up for a St. Vincent de Paul client. Homemade meals delivered with love are one of the easiest things to do to support a young mother through those difficult first weeks. In December alone we were able to serve a young single mother without any family support in our community, a mom who had just welcomed her third child, one who had suffered a devastating pregnancy loss, another unexpect- edly blessed with two young foster children, and a mom with small children who had just undergone major surgery.

Every family is different and every need is different, but every smile of thanks comes from a mom’s over-full heart. It can be hard not to cry sometimes when you drop off food.

Last November the Pro-Life Office invited parishes to meet and share plans and challenges for Walking with Moms. We took away lots of ideas, such as parish- logo blankets and other ways to welcome newborns, pregnancy blessings after Mass, group rosaries and the Spiritual Adoption program for students. Hearing about St. Elizabeth’s “Fourth Trimester” post-partum support group to assist fragile and stressed moms in a physically and emotionally difficult time was truly exciting news.

People need to know we exist, so Father Ross invited a member to describe the program after each Mass one weekend. He also made prayer cards for us to hand out. Bulletin reminders raise awareness that pro-life, pro-mom help is close at hand. And although more volunteers are always welcome, we continue to lay new plans and feel confident that we can provide a range of support even on short notice.

Everyone can help in some way, especially with prayer and encouragement. When you praise a mom’s courage with an unex- pected blessing, you are helping her say “Yes, the path may be hard, but my child and I are going to be alive together to face what ever comes our way.”

I have been deeply moved to see such a great parish response to WWMIN. I think a lot of the reason for this effort is that WWMIN, especially from young moms with their own families to tend. Walking with Moms in Need lets us apply our different skills and talents, practice our Catholic faith and together show our commit- ment to the sanctity of human life.

As one of our founding mothers said, “How could I not join?” I pray every parish will say the same. Ellen Curtin and her husband Dan raised their four children in St. Thomas Parish and since retirement volunteer regularly at the Rose Garden Mission. Ellen is on the We Choose Life Committee.

Martyrs witness to the power of love

Cindy Wooden
Catholic News Service

Martyrdom is primarily an act of love, not heroism, and while it often comes in the midst of persecution, it should motivate Christians to seek peace and reconciliation, Pope Francis said.

Persecution and martyrdom are not a thing of the past, he told people at his weekly general audience April 19. “Today there is persecution of Christians in the world. A lot. There are more martyrs today than there were” in the first centuries of Christianity.

As part of his series of talks about “zeal” for evangelization, Pope Francis spoke about the witness of “the host of martyrs — men and women of every age, language and nation — who have given their life for Christ.”

“Martyrdom is primarily an act of love, not religious sisters,” he said. “One should never kill in the name of God, because for him we are all brothers and sisters. But together one can give one’s life for others.”

Pope Francis prayed that Christians would “never tire of bearing witness to the Gospel, even when God will be all in all,” the pope said.

“Martyrs, in imitation of Christ and his grace, turn the violence of those who refuse the proclamation (of the Gospel) into a supreme occasion of love, which goes as far as forgiving their persecutors,” the pope said.

“Never tire of bearing witness to the Gospel,” the pope said.

“In a situation of war and dire poverty, Pope Francis said, “there have been shining witnesses of faith, such as that of the Missionaries of Charity. They are still present today in Yemen, where they offer assistance to elderly who are sick and to people with disabilities. They welcome everyone, of any religion, because charity and fraternity have no boundaries.”

The sisters’ witness to love for others has cost them dearly though. The pope reminded the crowd in St. Peter’s Square that three of the sisters — Sisters Aletta, Zeila and Michael — were “killed by a fascist” in July 1998 as they were returning home from Mass.

“More recently, shortly after the beginning of the still ongoing conflict, in March 2016, Sister Anselm, Sister Marguerite, Sister Regina and Sister Judith were killed together with some laypeople who helped them in their work of charity among the least,” the pope said.

The dozen laypeople included “some Muslim faithful who worked with the religious sisters,” he said.

“It moves us to see how the witness of blood can unite people of different religions,” he continued. “One should never kill in the name of God, for because for him we are all brothers and sisters. But together one can give one’s life for others.”

A new intergenerational covenant

Today over 90,000 newly older adults and people with disabilities are languishing on Medicaid-funded state-waiting lists without caregivers to provide needed services. By 2030, 3.5 million new workers will be needed in long-term care services just to keep pace with our rapidly aging population. Without dramatic changes, thousands of older adults and their families will lose access to quality care, creating fertile ground for the legalization of assisted suicide and euthanasia.

I share these frightening statistics not to be a prophet of doom but to issue a call to prayer and action. There are many things we can do today to nurture a covenant between generations and a more caring culture.

1. AFFIRM LIFE by helping the seniors you know to pursue what is most meaningful to them.
2. DEFY DEATH by voting against assisted suicide and euthanasia.
3. SUPPORT LIFE by helping others to understand the inherent evil of these acts.
4. CREATE opportunities for intergenerational encounters and encourage youth to explore a caring profession, or a priestly or religious vocation.
5. PRAY that young people will be drawn to careers in geriatrics/gerontology and even better, to life-long geriatrics.
6. SUPPORT immigration reform to make it easier for qualified caregivers to enter the workforce in our country.
7. Support reform of restrictive long-term care regulations and inadequate financing.
8. Two years ago, Pope Francis instituted a day honoring grandparents and the elderly to be celebrated each year on the fourth Sunday of July. It is my dream that this day will evolve to the point where the streets of our major cities are filled with families and people of all ages joyful affront the covenant between generations.
9. Sister Constance Veit is the communications director for the Little Sisters of the Poor in the United States and an occupational therapist.

Stewardship and Mission Services

Due to a planned retirement, the Roman Catholic Diocese of Covington, KY (www.covdio.org) seeks candidates for the position of Director of the Office of Stewardship and Mission Services. The message of stewardship has been part of the salvation history of the Church. All of the teachings of stewardship come directly from the Gospels, the Old Testament, and the letters of the New Testament. Stewardship is the way God expects us to live, with gratitude and with awareness that everything we have is a gift. The goals of this office are straightforward and include: stewardship formation and education; research and planning; development of diocese-wide support for parishes, ministries, and schools in areas of programs; and business and fund development, especially the Diocesan Parish Annual Appeal which makes so many diocesan services possible. This office also works to spread the message of Mission through prayer, education, works of justice, and providing financial support to activities and organizations such as the Seminarian Education Fund; Religious Retirement; International and Domestic Needs; Peter’s Pence; and Operation Rice Bowl. The Director represents the Bishop of Covington and the Office throughout the Diocese and the community at-large to develop relationships and support. S/he provides a wide variety of services to pastors and parishes, including stewardship conferences, programs for school children, and estate planning seminars. We seek an outgoing, creative, faith-filled Catholic individual with a servant’s heart and the expertise and experience to lead, manage, and inspire others to support diocesan initiatives. We require an individual with significant experience in comprehensive fundraising at a senior level, including experience with planned giving, major gifts, and annual giving programs. Those interested in this opportunity may submit a letter of interest along with a comprehensive resume or C-V, including compensation history and experience with planned giving, major gifts, and annual giving programs. To apply, please send your letter of interest, resume, and contact information to Sister Constance Veit, SPHR, at skopyay@covdio.org or 859-392-1589.
Benedictine Sister Andrea Collopy died peacefully on Monday, April 3 at St. Walburg Monastery at age 96. She was born to Edward Collopy and Marie Schawe Collopy on April 7, 1926. She was the oldest of eight — three brothers and four sisters.

A Benedictine sister for over 76 years, Sister Andrea served as teacher for 40 years at Villa Madonna Academy, including five as director of the boarding school. She completed her bachelor’s degree in English and History at Villa Madonna College in 1949, and her MA in English at the University of Notre Dame in 1955.

Sister Andrea taught English, History and Latin at VMA. To one Currened Events student, Sister Andrea seemed to have comprehensive knowledge of the entire world, it was daunting to take one of her exams. She invited students to meet her high standards with warmth and understanding. In 40 years of teaching Sister Andrea taught generations of students who remember her with love and respect.

Sister Andrea Collopy, O.S.B.

Sister Andrea took on several roles within the Benedictine community: the community’s secretary, procurator, sub-prioresse and house and infirmary coordinator. Sister Andrea’s life gives 2023 as her “retirement,” although her generous and hard work persisted. Humble, honest and gracious, she still worried that she might not be good enough for heaven.

She is preceded in death by her parents Edward C. and Marie Schawe Collopy; her brothers, James, Thomas and Edward, Jr.; her sisters Mary Wright, Rita Thaman, Ann Egbers, Claire Herringer, many nieces and nephews, VMA alumni, friends and her Benedictine community.

A vigil service and Mass of Christian Burial were held Tuesday, April 11 at St. Walburg Monastery. Memorials are suggested to St. Walburg Monastery, 2500 Amsterdam Rd., Villa Hills, KY 41017.

Vatican to bring pope’s encyclicals to life in architecture exhibit

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Commemorating 10 years since the election of Pope Francis, the Vatican will physically represent the teachings of his encyclicals at the Venice Biennale international architecture exhibition May 20 to Nov. 26. The Vatican’s exhibit, titled “Social Friendship: Meeting in the Garden,” will take visitors through scenes in which person-like “figures,” holding their arms open in welcome and acting out scenes of dialogue, convey themes inspired by the encyclicals “Fratelli Tutti, on Fraternity and Social Friendship.” The exhibit will then lead to a garden constructed of reused materials with plots growing vegetables from different parts of the world, chicken coops, seed storage facilities and rest areas. The space is intended to be one of contemplation and represent Pope Francis’ ecological encyclical “Laudato si’, On Care for Our Common Home.”

Supreme Court hears arguments over Christians’ right not to work on Sunday

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments in a case April 18 that could have broad implications for employees seeking religious accommodations from their employer. The high court heard oral arguments in Groff v. DeJoy, a case concerning Gerald Groff, an evangelical Christian and former U.S. Postal Service worker, who was denied an accommodation to observe his Sunday Sabbath by not taking Sunday shifts. Federal law prohibits employers from firing employees seeking religious accommodations unless the employer can show those accommodations cannot be “reasonable” met without “undue hardship.” In a 1977 decision in Trans World Airlines v. Hardison, the high court found that the “undue hardship” standard is not met even at a minimal cost. Groff alleged in federal court that USPS failed to provide him with reasonable accommodations for his religious practices after he sought a religious accommodation not to work Sunday shifts. During oral arguments, the justices were inquisitive about the facts of the case, with some pondering whether Groff’s accommodation was possible for a large employer like USPS but would place an undue burden on a small business or USPS, but would place an undue burden on a small business open seven days a week, such as a rural grocery store. They also questioned how such an accommodation for some Christians who observe the Sabbath like Groff might impact other Christians who wish to attend church services on Sundays but feel they don’t meet the requirements for a similar accommodation.

Church leaders call for return to dialogue in Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Catholic bishops have joined diplomats and other leaders across the world in urging fighting factions in Sudan to down arms as the death toll during four days of violence continued to rise. Fighting between the regular army and a paramilitary broke out in the northeastern African country April 14, with the two sides firing tanks, artillery and other heavy weapons. In Khartoum, the capital city giant mushroom smoke clouds were seen billowing as fighter jets and attack helicopters dropped bombs. Anti-aircraft fire could be heard cracking in response. The latest fighting has raised fears of a civil war for the country which has been trying to return to democracy after decades of military rule. “There is fighting all over the country. We are infants,” Bishop Tonderi Tkile Kuku Andali of El Obeid told OSV News April 17 from Khartoum. “Right now, there are gunshots all over. Thank God, we are safe.” In Juba, Archbishop Stephen Ameyu Martin Trille Kuku Andali of El Obeid told OSV News April 17 from Juba, “We are aware many people are trapped by the fighting away from their homes, many in their homes, with no way to access basic needs for their survival and their families. Many have been injured and others have died,” Archbishop Mula wrote in a statement April 17. He also called for prayers for Sudan in the spirit of Easter. “We pray for the protection of all people caught in the conflict.”

Steady decline of U.S. Latinos identifying as Catholics sounds alarm

WASHINGTON — The percentage of Hispanic adults identifying as Catholic declined from 67% in 2010 to 43% in 2022, according to a Pew Research Center study released April 13. At the same time, U.S. Latinos who identify as religiously unaffiliated (describing themselves as atheist, agnostic or “nothing in particular”) increased from 10% in 2010 to 30% in 2022. Hoffmann Ospino, a Boston College professor with years of experience examining the role of Hispanic Catholics in the future of the Catholic Church in the U.S, said that this decline has been “in the works” for decades and that younger generations of Latinos are less likely to identify as Catholic; mirror- ing trends across other ethnicities. Despite the 24% decline over the last decade, Catholics remain the largest religious group among Latinos in the United States, the Pew report said.
